Lynn Gendusa Speaks of Life Lessons - empathy and kindness

Monday, April 12, Lynn Walker Gendusa, author and nationally published columnist, will be the guest speaker at the Rotary Club of Sandy Springs.

After spending forty-three years as an Interior Designer in the Atlanta area, Lynn retired in 2015.

She rekindled her love of writing and began to pen stories and essays. Within a month after putting her tape measure away, she became a columnist for her old hometown newspaper in LaGrange, Georgia. Today she writes weekly columns for several news outlets in Georgia.

She has been featured regularly in the USA Today Network throughout the country and in Guideposts, MSN.com, and Senior magazines distributed in Canada and the US.

She is now working on her second book after her first publication, "It's All Write with Me! Essays from my heart", published in 2018.

She resides in Roswell with her husband, David, enjoying a Brady Bunch life with their combined five children and four grandchildren.

US Army Captain Sean M Minton, looking for international peace

Monday April 5th U.S. Army Capt. Sean M. Minton addressed the Rotary Club of Sandy Springs. Sean is a Rotary Scholar, is currently stationed at Fort Steward near Savannah, but has recently spent much of his time abroad. Sean presented a brief overview of the whirlwind events of his last year of studies.

Sean's area of study is International Peace and Conflict which is part of the War Studies Department of Kings College in London.

Sean has spent a major portion of his studies concentrating on the North Atlantic Treaty Organization. He sees NATO (and the thirty countries it currently includes) as a pivotal component of international peace. He says, "If NATO breaks down, it will be a sign that international order is breaking down."

Wanting to know what makes NATO tick, he resolved to look deeper into the sociological institutionalism of the alliance. He chose three major events to focus his attention.

The first was the 2007 Estonia cyber-attack - more information here:

The second was the 2018: Salisbury novichok poisonings - more information here:

And the third was the 2019: Turkey-Russia missile deal - more information here:

He built a case study around each event that would offer him a broad perspective and insight. He hoped to gain a fuller understanding of the NATO Alliance. Looking closely at the responses of NATO to these events helped him to understand how it functions. In short, Sean concluded that NATO is an institution made up of people which are shaped by our environment. When he speaks of the environment, he means the threats to peace and order. He asserts that NATO can exert a powerful influence in a push-pull relationship with the environment and, in a sense, be like the military arm of international order. Put simply, NATO's essential and enduring purpose is to safeguard the freedom and security of all its members by political and military means. Collective defense is at the heart of the Alliance and creates a spirit of solidarity and cohesion among its members.
