

THIS WEEK'S PRGRAM AT GRIFFIN ROTARY

Libraries Are Not Defunct Dinosaurs

Dunham

Chantel Dunham, Director of Development for the University of Georgia Libraries, certainly dispelled any speculation that libraries are outdated and defunct with our ready access to information through the worldwide web. The UGA Libraries make up the largest library system in Georgia with four libraries on the main UGA Campus in Athens and several other UGA sites across the state. Approximately 5 million volumes of books as well as maps, photographs, and other historical documents and information are housed within these libraries. On the main campus, the Miller Learning Center has a library that is used by 5000 students and serves as a hub of activities with 25 classrooms and an electronic library. It was and is designed to accommodate the way today's students learn. The Science Library on the South Campus serves approximately 600 students and supports collections for research and instruction in the physical and life sciences. The Hargrett Library in the Russell Special Collections Building has over 30,000 ft<sup>2</sup> feet of vaults maintained at 50°F and 30% relative humidity to carefully preserve rare books, historical documents, photographs, maps, archives, and records. Holdings date back to the 15th Century. A political library is also housed in the Russell Building with a collection of Richard B. Russell's works. Many others works are stored there on various subjects including colonial history, Native American history, the largest collection of John Abbot's works on insects in Georgia, and even the Walter J. Brown Media Archives & Peabody Awards Collection. Much more is there, and you are encouraged to go online to learn more (www.libs.uga.edu).

Art Hammond (left), Club Treasurer, did the honors of presenting President Janice Wallace with a plaque recognizing her as a Will Watt Fellow. The Will Watt Fellow is a milestone in giving to the Georgia Rotary Student Program (GRSP) signifying $1,000 total giving to GRSP. Georgia Rotarians have promoted world peace through this program since 1946. Each year, about 60 students from all over the world make friends in Georgia through this scholarship program, learning about different cultures and lifestyles. Rotary promotes goodwill through friendship and understanding.

END HUMAN TRAFFICKING!

Cindy McCann says that one of the largest impediments to ending human trafficking is awareness. She and others (including DG Raymond Ray and Rotarians across District 6900) are looking to raise the awareness of this global issue. But, as McCann says, the real problem is in our own communities here in the U.S. There is an average of 300 acts of sexual exploitation of children occurring in Georgia every day! District 6900 is looking to raise the awareness of the problem, to educate our communities, to address local and state laws, and offer refuge and shelter for human trafficking victims. Please sign the sheets at our meetings to show your support!
